

ACG's Favorite Quiz Show Receives Rave Reviews

Rochester's Mayo School of Graduate Medical Education wins GI Jeopardy finals

The finals of the Second Annual ACG GI Jeopardy competition were held during the 2005 ACG Postgraduate Course in Honolulu, Hawaii. The program featured two-member teams of fellows from five training programs from across North America who scored highest in the preliminary round. Represented this year were Case Western Reserve University (MetroHealth), Duke University Hospital, Mayo School of Graduate Medical Education (Rochester), Thomas Jefferson University, and Washington University/B-JH/SLCH Consortium.

In the preliminary round, 70 training programs competed in an online multiple choice quiz consisting of 40 questions covering a range of gastrointestinal organs, diseases, and treatments. The training programs were then ranked based on the number of correct answers and the time it took to complete the test. There were no limits on how many trainees from each program could participate in the online segment. The top five programs were each invited to send a two-member team of fellows to the final round in Honolulu, all expenses paid. The program was made possible in part by the generous sponsorship of AstraZeneca and TAP Pharmaceuticals.

This year's GI Jeopardy finals featured the top five programs squaring off in a fight for the buzzer before a live audience of 300 supporters. ACG Training Committee member, Ronald Szyjkowski, MD, FACP, served as enthusiastic host, donning a festive Hawaiian shirt and giving Alex Trebek a run for his money. The live game featured six categories per round with questions covering a gamut of gastrointestinal organs, diseases, treatments, and history. A special Hawaii category added to the competitive atmosphere. After a close and spirited match, the top three teams, MetroHealth, Mayo, and Thomas Jefferson, moved on to the final round. Prabhleen Chahal, MD, and Ganapathy Prasad, MD, from Mayo School of Graduate Medical Education ultimately took home the championship trophy and earned a $1,000 grant toward travel to next year's ACG Annual Meeting and Postgraduate Course in Las Vegas, Nevada. Tune in next year to see who will take home the championship!
